

Martha G. Alvarado

Martha G. Alvarado has extensive experience with child development having obtained her Bachelors of Science Degree in Childhood Development from California State University at Northridge. Martha has taught many age levels and cared for many children often serving as their primary caretaker. She has worked with children most of her entire adult life from pre-school through junior high school levels. She has worked in family intervention helping in the development of parental skills for the protection of children. She has taught appropriate parenting skills to parents as directed by Dependency Court. She has volunteered for the Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts to help in the development of good character and citizenship in children. Martha also volunteered with hospice care providing companionship and comfort for elderly in their final stages of life.